

>>> "Linda D. Morris" <lindad@net-link.net> 06/02/03 07:08PM >>>

This comment is to advise that I believe your attempt to adopt a 12 point type standard does not take into consideration the numerous court forms that utilize a 10 point type face or smaller and is ill-advised. See the multitudinous Probate Court forms.

Also, the recording statute provides for a 10 point type. Quite frankly I am tired of clerks telling lawyers that pleadings do not qualify for acceptance on technical issues. Additionally, if court rules adopt facsimile filings, the reduction of type is generally from 12 point to 10 point when transmitted.

I urge you to think carefully before adopting these rules. Perhaps your time would be better served insisting that Probate Courts statewide adopt an inventory fee in a decedent's case based on net value of the estate assets.

Sincerely,
LD Morris (P37408)